LYMPHEDEMA: New Solutions for a Chronic Condition

November 15, 2017

Please accept 3M’s invitation to share an evening with your colleagues while enhancing your wound healing expertise regarding Lymphedema. Our speaker will be John M. Macdonald, MD, FACS, Department of Dermatology and Cutaneous Surgery, Miller School of Medicine, University of Miami.

This presentation will provide an in depth and provocative overview of full leg compression. The physics, physiology, clinical indications and techniques of compression application will be discussed.

Presenter: John Macdonald, MD, FACS

Dr. Macdonald has been extensively involved in the clinical and research aspects of wound care, venous and arterial insufficiency, lymphedema and new technologies for treatment. He has lectured extensively both in North America and internationally. Dr. Macdonald has authored numerous articles and text chapters relating to both lymphedema and wound related lymph stasis. He is the editor of the 2010 published, WHO White Paper – ‘Wound and Lymphedema Management.’ In 2002, he was appointed to the faculty of the Department of Dermatology and Cutaneous Surgery at the University of Miami, Miller School of Medicine. He is the past president of the Association for the Advancement of Wound Care (AAWC) and is the founder and Secretariat for the World Alliance for Wound and Lymphedema Care, (WAWLC) based in Geneva, Switzerland. At the recent Spring SAWC conference in San Antonio he received the John Boswick Memorial Award, a prestigious award given for lifelong achievement and dedication in the field of wound care.

Dr. Macdonald is a well known Thoracic, General and Vascular Surgeon in south Florida. He established the wound care program and the Haitian Relief Tent Hospital two days after the devastating earthquake in January 2010. He is the Medical Director of the Wound and Lymphedema program at the Hospital Bernard Mevs in Port Au Prince, Haiti.
